Q: How can I remove a class from form elements with Javascript? I'd like to remove a class from a set of inputs and then add it to the next set of inputs in Javascript. Is that possible? Here's an example: `function removeClass() { var form = document.getElementsByClassName('toggleButtons')[0]; var inputs = form.getElementsByClassName('item'); for (var i = 0; i A: Use a counter to keep track of the input and use the modulo operator % to select the next input when you are on the last one. What's New In?

Monday, November 30, 2006 Tin Man on the Couch and Please Knock-Knock. Seems that we all need a little help from our friends. Once again, I'm learning a new lesson in the role of friends. Let me explain. Yesterday, my eldest son, the real one, called me at 11pm to ask for my help with getting into a friend's basement. He was really, really, really drunk, and had dropped a bottle of wine on his foot in a night of excess. He needed me to help him hop on one foot, over to a phone, call 911, tell them he's walking home, and then I would help him down the stairs. Naturally, in my wisdom, I said "Maybe the best thing would be for you to go to a friend's home that has a couch. It will be more comfortable than the stairs, and you can sleep it off." I'm so glad I was able to get rid of him in my basement, but the lesson for me went much deeper than my son. My friend, who has probably had too much wine in her life too, probably, and I'm being kind of nice here, said she'd be happy to drive me home. So, I told her to meet me at their house, which is about a quarter mile away, since I don't want her going out of her way. Also, I'm going to be out anyway helping my brother to prepare to take off for Korea early in the morning. Well, she tells me that she and her husband are cleaning the house and once she was fixing to take off to the store for dog food. After a while, she told me that her husband was still cleaning, but wanted to go inside and watch tv, and then she gave up. She said that she had probably been cleaning for a good 20 minutes or so, and had gone outside to talk to her husband. She came back in and left again, and after a while, she came back and saw that he was still cleaning. Then, she left again for about 15 minutes. Now, I'm starting to get worried. She said she had called them when she was leaving, but there was no answer, so she was wondering if they might have been out running errands or something, and she didn't know how long it might be. I told her that they couldn't have gone anywhere, because I saw them turn on their lights
